Mike Spagnola has dedicated his practice to representing employers in all facets of labor and employment law. He focuses on solving difficult and complicated labor and employment matters and is a fierce and tireless advocate for his clients.

Mike represents employers exclusively in connection with all aspects of labor and employment law. Mike prides himself on being a “soup to nuts” labor and employment lawyer, specializing in both traditional labor law and employment law. This allows Mike to service his clients with respect to all of the client's labor and employment law needs.

Mike represents management in connection with labor relations matters including unfair labor practice charges, union election petitions, grievance arbitrations, and serving as lead negotiator in collective bargaining. He also counsels management on union avoidance and represents employer trustees in deadlock arbitrations under the Labor Management Relations Act.

Mike also appears on behalf of clients in state and federal courts and before administrative agencies, for cases relating to discrimination, retaliation, harassment, whistleblowing, wrongful discharge, wage and hour law, worker classification, unemployment compensation, FMLA, workplace torts, breach of contract, non-competition agreements, and trade secret misappropriation. Mike also handles severance negotiations, negotiates contractual language, and represents businesses in commercial litigation.

In addition to handling litigation and labor relations matters, Mike counsels employers on preventive labor and employment law measures, with a focus on lawful employee discipline, and statutory, regulatory, and contractual compliance. He works with management to identify problematic labor and employment law issues, and develops strategies, policies and procedures to assist in litigation avoidance.

While in law school, Mike was a member of the Quinnipiac University Law Review. Mike also served as a Judicial Intern to the Honorable Peter C. Dorsey, District Judge for the United States
