MICHAEL D. MALKOWSKI

Associate / Atlanta
mmalkowski@fordharrison.com / P: 404-888-3934

Michael Malkowski focuses his legal practice on representing management in labor and employment matters.

Michael assists employers with a range of workplace issues, including employment discrimination claims, labor relations, and collective bargaining matters. He began his career with FordHarrison as a Summer Associate, where he gained experience preparing position statements in response to Equal Employment Opportunity Commission (EEOC) charges, conducting legal research, and drafting memoranda addressing labor and employment issues. He also participated in collective bargaining negotiations and mediations, gaining firsthand exposure to labor-management relations and the negotiation process.

Prior to joining FordHarrison, Michael gained experience in both the public and private sectors, assisting trial attorneys with legal research, motion drafting, and the analysis of testimony and case materials. He also worked in corporate communications, developing employee benefits communications and contributing to strategic communications planning related to labor contract negotiations. These experiences provided him with valuable insight into employee relations, organizational communications, and the complexities of labor-management dynamics.

While attending the University of Georgia School of Law, Michael served as Executive Articles Editor of the Georgia Journal of International and Comparative Law and earned the CALI Award in Criminal Procedure.
