ANAHI E CASAS PEREZ

Associate / St. Louis
aperez@fordharrison.com / P: 314-257-0303

Anahi Casas Perez represents employers in a variety of labor and employment matters and assists clients with workplace-related disputes and compliance issues.

Prior to joining FordHarrison, Anahi practiced labor and employment law with a full-service law firm in St. Louis, where she advised and defended employers in employment-related disputes and administrative proceedings. Her experience included preparing position statements in response to Equal Employment Opportunity Commission charges, conducting legal research, drafting discovery and dispositive motions, interviewing witnesses, and assisting clients with labor relations matters.

Anahi earned her law degree from Saint Louis University School of Law with a concentration in Employment Law. During law school, she received an Academic Excellence Award in Employment Law and for Diversity and Cultural Competency. Anahi also served as Articles Editor of the ABA Journal of Labor and Employment Law, held leadership positions within the Student Bar Association and the Women of Color Collective, and received the St. Louis University School of Law 1843 Scholarship. She also gained valuable experience through a judicial clerkship with Judge Cynthia L. Martin of the Missouri Western District Court of Appeals.
